Title	Hong Kong's Endangered Species
Introduction	What has happened? In the past few decades, Hong Kong has been well-known for its economic and financial achievements. Unfortunately, Hong Kong's rapid economic growth has cost serious destruction of our environment, which results in the decrease in the number of certain precious native species.
Body	Why are they disappearing? First of all, because of the high population density, this small city actually leaves less space for the wildlife than they need. Furthermore, the development of housing and other business activities to satisfy the demand for our increasing population is another factor. The awareness of saving the city's animals However, in recent years, people started to realize that the environment is an important part of our cultural heritage. This has led to a demand for government action to save endangered species. Over the past ten years, therefore, the government has made serious consideration in balancing development and environmental protection.
Solutions	What have we done to solve the problem? Now, under the protection of the law, there are over hundreds of animals on the national protected species list. Once an animal is on the list, the government takes action to prevent its extinction and make sure the animal's continual survival. Through these actions, the natural treasures in Hong Kong survive and people have more opportunities to enjoy our beautiful nature.
